Julie Lindahl is an author and social entrepreneur. During the past decade she has been writing and pursuing projects concerning wellness and philosophies of good living from her base in Sweden. She is the author of two books and a third upcoming in 2010. She blogs for The Local, Sweden's news in English on the Internet with an audience of more than 700,000 unique viewers per month, and she is a columnist for Nordstjernen/Vestkusten, Swedish-America's oldest newspaper reaching an audience of over 30,000 households per month. She edits her own e-magazine about well-being with Nordic inspiration, www.nordicwellbeing.com.

In 2010 Julie founded with colleagues an organization for renewing the art of story-telling for society. The organization is creating methods and materials for helping children and child-carers to use the art of story-telling to address the challenges of growing up in a modern, high-pressured society.

Prior to becoming an author and social entrepreneur Julie worked as a management consultant for a number of companies including KPMG, Rambøll and Landell Mills Limited. Her work within these companies concerned their portfolio in developing countries including in Southeast and South Asia and the Pacific, Central Asia and Africa. During this time Julie worked with questions of conflict resolution, poverty alleviation and economic development.

She has a BA Magna Cum Laude with a major in English Literature from Wellesley College, Massachusetts, USA, and M.Phil. in International Affairs sponsored by an Overseas Research Scholarship at Oxford University. Julie is a Fulbright Scholar. She was raised in ten countries and today lives in Sweden with her husband and twins, a boy and a girl. During 2000-2009 they lived on an island in Sweden, an experience which Julie has been given an award by www.gather.com to write a memoir about.
